Fans not Meek as Mill thrown in jail

'Thumb his nose.' Philly rapper Meek Mill was thrown in jail over the weekend after he was found in violation of his probation. Outcry. Fans are using #FreeMeekMill, claiming the hip-hop artist was thrown in jail for no reason. Canceled. He won't be performing at Temple this weekend. SEPTA driver assaulted in North Philly

SEPTA is investigating the assault of a Route 54 bus operator around 1 a.m. Sunday.

The operator sustained non-life-threatening injuries, but no information was available on what prompted the assault, a spokesperson said.

The incident occurred near 22nd Street and Lehigh Avenue while the bus was traveling with passengers.

Police are seeking the driver of a white Mercedes Benz after the incident, reports say. SAM NEWHOUSE

Center City toasts, mourns World Cup

Progress. The final game of the world soccer tournament brought out hundreds of fans, even though the U.S. wasn't playing.

Sorean Craig-Muller won't be going to work happy today.

The 26-year-old University of Scranton medical student, who was born in Germany but moved to the United States when he was younger, wore a black, yellow and red hat along with his white jersey while cheering for Germany at the outside screening of the World Cup at Fado Irish Pub in Center City.

After his birth country solidified its fourth World Cup championship, Craig-Muller was cautious about celebrating too hard, but admitted some pain was inevitable.

"I'm doing a rotation at University of Pennsylvania," Craig-Muller said. "I'll have to make it, but whether or not I'll be in good spirits, we'll see."

Fans of both Germany and Argentina congregated at the Irish Pub Sunday afternoon as the bar rolled out its large projection screen onto Locust Street, which was closed, for the final game of the worldwide soccer tournament.

The street was packed with solemn fans in blue and white shirts when Germany scored in extra time to nail down its 1-0 win over the South American country.

Nicole Martinoli, who was born in Argentina but now lives in Center City, was truly sad for one player in particular.

"I'm bummed because I don't want [Lionel] Messi to have that stigma on him. I just wanted him to do fantastic," said Martinoli, 24. "He had so much pressure. I just wanted him to have it all. Four Player of the Year [awards] in a row. and then to have a FIFA World Cup — it would have been, like, game over."

Rough road. Body slides out of coroner's van and into traffic

A pedestrian spotted a dead body on a gurney rolling through traffic on Street Road in Bucks County on Friday and then helped return it to the county coroner's vehicle from which it fell.

"Just when I thought I've seen everything," Jerry Bradley, an MMA fighter, wrote on Facebook. "That's a dead body on a stretcher that launched out of the back of a coroner's vehicle in Feasterville."

He told LevitownNow.com that at first he though it was a prank, but after he realized the severity of the matter, he helped the driver stop the gurney and get it out of the road.

The county coroner's office said a van door malfunctioned.

#FreeMeekMill. Probation violation lands rapper in prison

Rapper Meek Mill was sent from court to prison Friday for a three- to six-month sentence after he was found in violation of his probation.

This weekend, the 27-year-old star's shocked fans took to Twitter to express their outrage.

Tweets included "The system want to see him fail!" and "When you dark and successful they see you as a target!"

Mill was ordered to serve three to six months in prison for violating the terms of his probation, reports say. Mill was unable to appear for a show Friday night in Washington, D.C., and will miss his Saturday Homecoming Concert at Temple's Liacouras Center.

Judge Genece Brinkley reportedly found that Mill violated a direct order to not schedule concerts in July and August while a schedule with his probation officer was worked out.

On Twitter

- "#freemeekmill So what he violated his probation from a few years ago? Let the man rap and do what hes been doing best the past couple years" @BASSIUSBAIN
- "@MeekMill them Philly police hating cause n— u made it #FreeMeekMill #f—probation" @4REALTHO5
- "the streets behind u bruh..hold ya head" @MARR215

Other issues brought up at the hearing included Mill changing his cell phone number without telling authorities, posing in an Instagram picture with a gun which his lawyer said was a prop, and posting insults online about the prosecutor and probation officer handling his case.

"He was given every opportunity to do well. … He continued to thumb his nose at the court," said prosecutor Noel DeSantis, according to the D.A.'s office on Twitter.

DeSantis asked for Mill to get five to 10 years.

Once Mill completes his jail term, he will be placed again on probation for another five years.

The terms of the probation include regular check-ins with a probation officer and forbid Mill, whose real name is Robert Williams, from moving out of Philadelphia. SAM NEWHOUSE

TALK DIRTY AND GET DOWN TONIGHT

Lately, this is what blasts out of my car stereo as soon as I start the engine: "But your booty don't need explaining/talk dirty to me."

It is the favorite song of my 8-year-old, with "Turn Down for What" a close second. Yes, both are the "clean" versions of the songs and are featured on the CD "Now That's What I Call Music 50."

Every morning on the way to summer camp I get to hear Jason Derulo sing about how he needs a new passport and that girl he met in Rio. I banned the song for a while, solely because of the title/chorus. But then I realized my son has no idea what it means and really just likes the tune. It makes for a bracing and loud ride to camp, but it gets him in a good mood.

One song I will NOT allow, however, is another of Derulo's called "Wiggle," because it is all about a woman's posterior. (And a ham sammich.) No. I have my limits.

Quoted

I occasionally burst out singing Sir Mix-a-Lot's 'I like big butts and I can not lie!' My son joins in, because he is 8 and butts are funny.

Sometimes I wonder if that is hypocritical, however, because I occasionally burst out singing Sir Mix-a-Lot's "I like big butts and I can not lie!" My son joins in, because he is 8 and butts are funny.

Growing up in Northeast Philadelphia, my friends and I belted out many song lyrics, not fully understanding the meaning. My friend Anne and I took dance lessons and performed a jazz-dance routine at St. Timothy's Talent Show when we were 9. The song? "Get Down Tonight" by KC and the Sunshine Band.

Here are some lyrics: "Do a little dance/make a little love/get down tonight."
We had NO idea what it meant. We liked it because of its disco-ness and because it was on my WFIL record album.

Millennials may disagree, but I was lucky to go to high school and college during the BEST decade ever for music — the 1980s. By then, I fully understood the deep, philosophical meaning to such songs as "Bust A Move" and "Funky Cold Medina."

Oh, and we danced, too. None of this grinding or twerking stuff. We moved our feet and arms and entire bodies — not just our booties.

I think I know what songs need to go into my car's CD player tomorrow.

Clearing the air. State governments can help US speed up drone use

U.S. state governments should help break a regulatory logjam that currently bans aerial drones from delivering packages, filming movies and monitoring crops and pipelines, officials from Oklahoma, a state with extensive drone experience, said on Sunday.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration lacks rules to govern commercial drone activity, and is widely expected to miss a 2015 deadline for creating them because of their complexity. In the interim, state governments could help with key elements to take a major burden off the FAA, officials said.

Amazon.com Inc last week joined a growing list of companies that are seeking exemptions to the FAA ban, asking for permission to test drone package delivery near its headquarters in Seattle. REUTERS

YouTube meeting with Hollywood to gain premium content

Screaming for streaming. The site is the most popular location for video streaming.

YouTube is trying to lure more marketers for premium video advertising. / METRO PHOTO ILLUSTRATION

YouTube has embarked on a new round of discussions with Hollywood and independent producers to fund premium content, two sources with knowledge of the talks told Reuters, a move that could bolster a three-year-old multimillion-dollar effort that has had mixed success so far.

The talks underscore Google Inc.'s desire to complete YouTube's transition from a repository for grainy home videos to a site sporting the more polished content crucial to securing higher-priced advertising.

Over the past two months, YouTube executives have begun making the rounds, talking to Hollywood producers to explore the kinds of support it could offer its content creators and produce more must-see programming, according to the two people.

The second person said the site was interested in videos shorter than the 30-minute, TV network-quality Web shows that Amazon.com and other online sites have recently funded.

The latest round of discussions is in its initial phases and actual measures may never materialize, the sources said. REUTERS

Produce a series

$3M

Executives did not lay out exactly how a program would be structured. One of the two people said the site may offer between $1 million and $3 million to produce a series of programs, and it might contribute marketing funds as well.

Three dead after shootings in California

The gunman. He was identified as John Izeal Smith, 35, of Pasadena.

Three people were killed and two wounded in a shooting late on Saturday afternoon in Pasadena, California, before the gunman surrendered, police said.

Police responded to multiple 911 calls from residents about shots being fired and found a man barricaded in a home after "shooting indiscriminately" at people passing by, said Lt. Vasken Gourdikian of the Pasadena Police Department. The man also fired heavily upon officers arriving at the scene, he said.

After a standoff, police persuaded the suspected gunman to surrender and he was taken into custody without further incident, Gourdikian said.

Police did not provide a motive for the shootings nor whether the suspect had any connection to the victims. Two other people suffered minor to moderate injuries, he said. REUTERS

Perigee. Debut of the 'supermoon' hangs in the summer sky

A "supermoon" hangs in the sky above buildings on 14th Street in Manhattan. / BILLY BECERRA, METRO

A "supermoon" rose above cities from New York to London on Saturday night, the first of three times this year the full moon will orbit nearer the earth and appear unusually large and bright.

The supermoon is technically known as a "perigee moon" and occurs when the moon is full as it reaches perigee, the point of its orbit closest to the Earth, The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said in a statement. It looks largest when it's closest to the horizon — an optical illusion.

A 2013 supermoon was 14 percent bigger and 30 percent more luminous than the average full moon of that year, NASA said.

Two additional supermoons are expected in 2014: one on Aug. 10 and another on Sept. 9, NASA said. August's supermoon is expected to be the most remarkable of the year. REUTERS

'Beware.' Thousands of Gaza civilians flee area after warning

Thousands fled their homes in a Gaza Strip town on Sunday after Israel warned them to leave before it attacked rocket-launching sites, on the sixth day of an offensive that Palestinian officials said has killed at least 160 people.

Militants in Hamas-ruled Gaza kept up rocket salvoes deep into the Jewish state as the worst bout of Israel-Palestinian bloodshed in two years showed no signs of abating, and Western foreign ministers said a ceasefire was an urgent priority.

Israel dropped leaflets into the town of Beit Lahiya near Gaza's northern border. They read: "Those who fail to comply with the instructions to leave immediately will endanger their lives and the lives of their families. Beware."

The Israeli military told the residents of three of Beit Lahiya's 10 neighborhoods to get out of the town of 70,000 by midday on Sunday. U.N. officials said some 10,000 people had fled south to eight schools run by the world body in Gaza City.

A senior military officer, in a telephone briefing with foreign reporters, said Israel would "strike with might" in the Beit Lahiya area from the late evening hours on Sunday. REUTERS

The Gaza Health Ministry said at least 160 Palestinians — among them about 135 civilians, including 30 children — have died during six days of warfare.

Important relationship

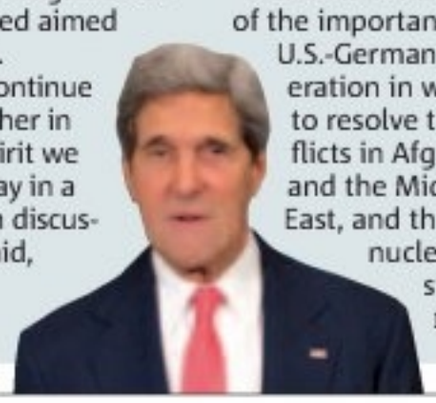
Amid new spy scandal, Kerry calls US and Germany 'great friends'

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry, standing alongside Germany's foreign minister on Sunday, stressed the strategic importance of relations between the two countries, which have been battered by new allegations of U.S. spying on Berlin.

"Let me emphasize the relationship between the United States and Germany is a strategic one," Kerry said in Vienna on the sidelines of nuclear talks with Iran. "We have enormous political cooperation and we are great friends."

Kerry, appearing alongside Germany's Frank-Walter Steinmeier, did not address the latest spy scandal, though his remarks appeared aimed at the subject.

"We will continue to work together in the kind of spirit we exhibited today in a very thorough discussion," Kerry said, adding that he wished Germany well in its World Cup soccer final against Argentina on Sunday.



Steinmeier also spoke of the importance of U.S.-German cooperation in working to resolve the conflicts in Afghanistan and the Middle East, and the Iran nuclear standoff. REUTERS

Newspaper reports

Pope says about 2 percent of priests are pedophiles

About 2 percent of Roman Catholic clerics are sexual abusers, an Italian newspaper on Sunday quoted Pope Francis as saying, adding that the pontiff considered the crime "a leprosy in our house."

But the Vatican issued a statement saying some parts of a long article in the left-leaning La Repubblica were not accurate, including one that quoted the pope as saying that there were cardinals among the abusers.

The article was a reconstruction of an hour-long conversation between Pope Francis and the newspaper's founder, Eugenio Scalfari, an atheist who has written about several past encounters with the pope.

"Many of my collaborators who fight with me [against pedophilia] reassure me with reliable statistics that say that the level of pedophilia in the Church is at about 2 percent," Francis was quoted as saying. REUTERS

OMG! Meet this German wrestler — now meet his huge right arm

Having problems opening that bottle of ketchup? Just ask Matthias Schlitte / REX FEATURES

German arm-wrestler Matthias Schlitte, famed for his ginormous right arm — the result of a rare genetic condition — tells Metro how his unique physicality helps him in everyday life.

How do you prepare yourself for tournaments?
Normally I go to the gym 5 or 6 times a week, for one to two hours at a time. My training is a combination of working on my chest muscles, shoulders, legs, back and special exercises like on a table for arm wrestling — and sparring, of course.

Any special diet?
I try to drink more water. Sometimes I have to lose some weight. And I drink special vitamin supplements.

Do you only wrestle with your gigantic right arm?
I can't say that my left hand is as strong as the right. But I do fight with my left one in national championships and at small tournaments.

So how big a difference is there between your arms, strength wise?
I can explain this by their size: My right bicep has 12 inches more than the left one. But make no mistake, my left hand is not weak — it's normal — but my right hand is very strong.

Visit us online at Metro.us/omg for more interviews.

You have a few nicknames: Popeye, Hellboy. What's your favorite?
Listen, almost all arm wrestlers are called Popeye. But call me Hellboy — I really like this name. It reflects the reality. [The comic book hero Hellboy has a large rock-like right arm.]

I heard you were shy about your abnormally large arm in your childhood. How did you feel growing up?
I don't think I was shier than the next guy. I was just a kid and did not face any big problems, though my right hand has always been larger than the left.

How did you get into arm wrestling?
In 2004, I played handball at school, but it was not so serious. And then I went to the arm wrestling tournament, and there were a lot of big heavyweight guys. I took part and I won. After this I was invited to train with the team.

Hellboy's powers are used for good deeds. How would you use yours?
In ordinary life I am very good at opening bottles. If my mother, for example, can't deal with a bottle, she always says, "Hey, Matthias, I need your help." ... I always tried to avoid fights. The first thing that parents told me before school: "Don't go into a fight. If you hit a person, then you can hurt him very seriously."

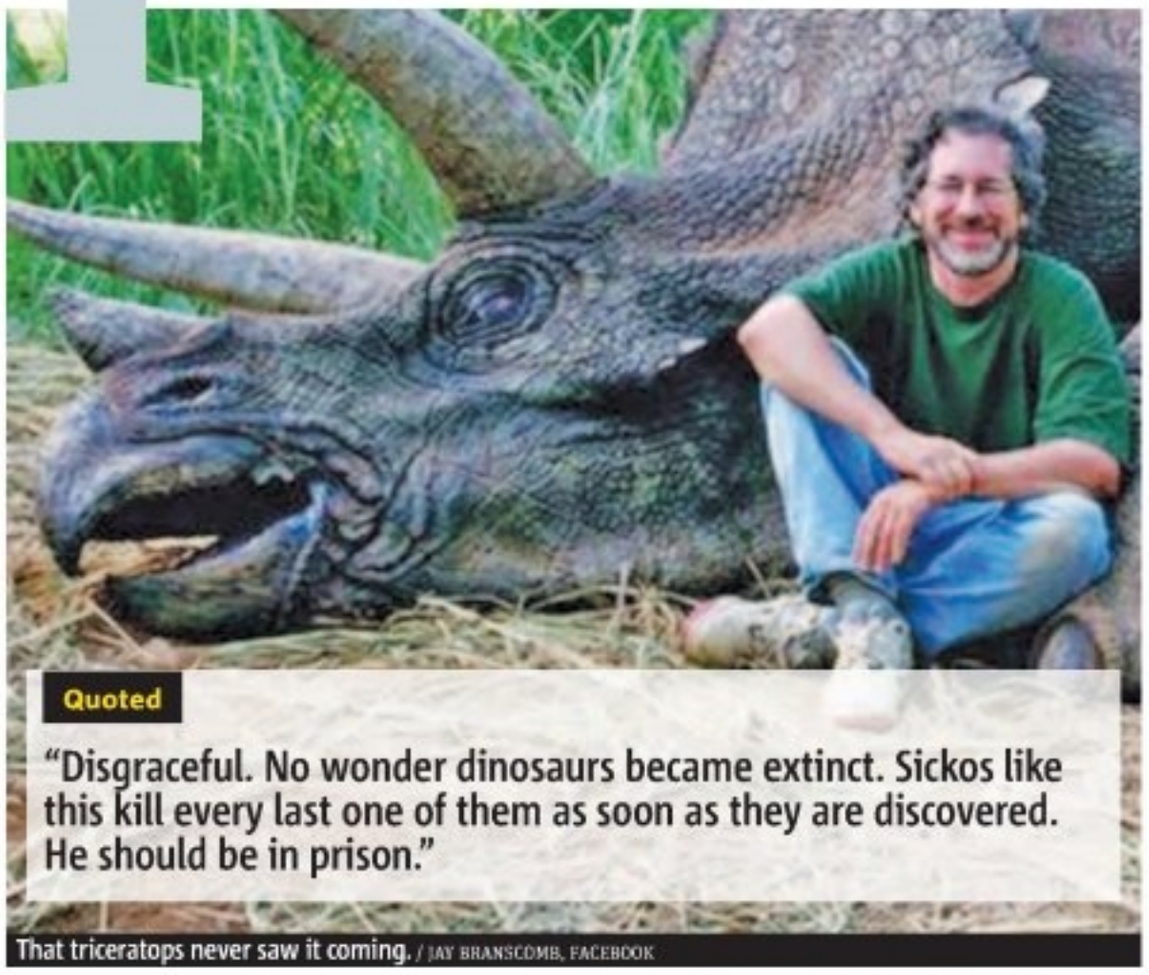
1 Spielberg faces close encounters of the dumbest kind



Quoted

"Disgraceful. No wonder dinosaurs became extinct. Sickos like this kill every last one of them as soon as they are discovered. He should be in prison."

That triceratops never saw it coming. / JAY BRANSCOMB, FACEBOOK

In what seems like a hard-to-believe plot in a Steven Spielberg movie, Facebook user Jay Branscomb made the most of recent outrage over rich people posting photos of themselves and the rare animals they've killed by posting a photo from the set of "Jurassic Park" featuring Spielberg and a mechanical Triceratops with the caption, "Disgraceful photo of recreational hunter happily posing next to a triceratops he just slaughtered. Please share so the world can name and shame this despicable man." The humorous image was shared more than 33,000 times. Here's the thing, though: There are a lot of gullible people on the Internet. Like, a lot. And a lot of them thought the image was real. Maybe they also thought "Jurassic Park" was a documentary? Here are some of the best responses, some of which we really hope are sarcastic.

They really said this

- "One day we realize that we are killing all animals on this planet and we need them to survive. But, when we realize it will be too late."
- "I did not know that Steven Spielberg is a dinosaur hunter. I am not only outraged, but disgusted!!"
- "Why did he kill such a rare animal?"
- "He's a disgusting inhumane p—. I think zoos are the best way to keep these animals safe. A—holes like this piece of s— are going into these beautiful animals' homes and killing them. It's no different to someone coming into your home and murdering you. I'm not watching any of your movies again, ANIMAL KILLER."

Talking points

Tracy Morgan ready to sue over fatal crash

TRACY MORGAN

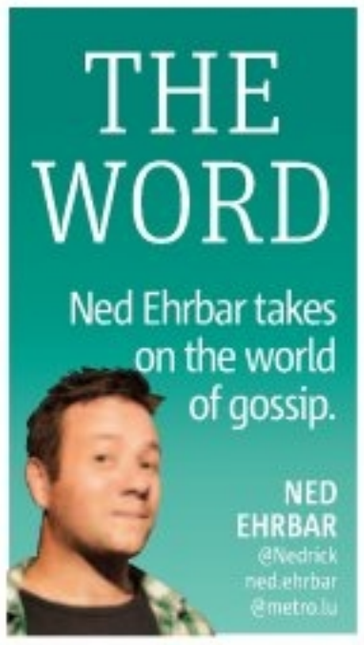
Tracy Morgan is out of the hospital and preparing to go to court. The still-recovering actor is suing Walmart over the horrific car accident that left him with broken ribs, a broken nose and a broken leg, and took the life of fellow comedian James McNair, according to Radar Online. Morgan's bus was struck by a Walmart truck driven by Kevin Roper, and the discount retail giant's negligence "was a substantial contributing factor in causing plaintiffs' injuries," the lawsuit states. It adds that Roper, who was driving 20 miles over the speed limit, should not have been allowed to drive after being awake for more than 24 hours. Representatives for Walmart responded with a statement, calling the crash a "terrible tragedy" and stating, "We are deeply sorry that one of our trucks was involved. As we've said, we're cooperating fully in the ongoing investigation."

Sharon Stone gets ahead of the tabloids

Sharon Stone is a national treasure, if for no other reason than how she talks about her butt. The 56-year-old recently told E! News that even though she's in great shape, going on vacation has her feeling nervous about her body. "I haven't worked out in a couple of months because I just didn't feel like it. But now I'm going on vacation and I know what they're going to do. [The tabloids] are going to put a circle around my ass and do one of those crazy magnified pictures saying, 'What happened? It's a bag of cheese,'" she laments. "I would just like to say it's a fine triple creme brie! '"

Bad satire is the new black

We'll definitely be seeing these ladies next season. / GETTY IMAGES



And because online hoaxes, no matter how ridiculous, seem to keep dominating social media, we have to mention this one: Don't worry, "Orange Is the New Black" fans, your favorite show about women in prison hasn't actually been canceled. A site that's apparently supposed to specialize in satire called Empire News posted a story over the weekend that Netflix had canned the Emmy-nominated series, which is currently filming its third season. Fans online, naturally, freaked out, because that's what the Internet is for. Apparently everyone was supposed to know it was a hoax because of this patently ridiculous quote at the end of the article attributed to Netflix CEO Reed Hastings: "A woman's place is in the home, in the kitchen, taking care of children. A woman in jail? How does anyone watch this show in the first place?" That's just not good, even as satire. Hey, Empire News? You're doing it wrong.

The man without a face

Interview. You know "Dawn of the Planet of the Apes" star Andy Serkis. You just may not know it.

Andy Serkis returns to the "Ape" series as its mammal protagonist. The finished product: Serkis becomes chimp leader Caesar (inset).

SERKIS: GETTY IMAGES, CAESAR: WETA

He's the biggest movie star you don't know by face (and maybe name): British actor Andy Serkis is the performer who was motion-captured to portray Gollum in the "Lord of the Rings" and "Hobbit" films, the titular super-gorilla in Peter Jackson's "King Kong" and, these days, Caesar in the current "Planet of the Apes" reboot series. "Dawn," the franchise's latest, finds mo-cap technology at its best-so-far — which is good, as Serkis will be using it extensively for his directorial debut, "The Jungle Book."

So much of this performance is in the face.
That's right, it's very much an internalized performance. [Caesar is] evolving to be more humanlike because of the inherent intelligence that he grew up with. It's coursing through his veins. We see him go from an ape who uses sign language in the beginning to using a much more philosophical and reflective use of human language toward the end.

Like the Tolkien films, the effects are done by the New Zealand company WETA. Do you work closely with them in post-production to get those subtleties of movement and facial expressions?
No. That used to be the case. For Gollum, that was the case, because when we did Gollum it was a slightly different system. My performance was filmed, as it is now, but then the animators basically copied all facial expressions afterward. So the animators' job was to literally match every nuance of my facial expressions. In the "Lord of the Rings" days, I used to talk to the animators afterward and re-enact bits for them. But today, 14 years later, the advancement of technology being what it is, the actors drive the facial capture. With the number of reference cameras on our faces, a lot of the work is done for them. Besides, our relationship spans 14 years. They've seen every single facial muscle of mine move in every single direction, and they've had to read every single underlying emotion in my face.

Do you find your acting approach changes doing live-action or mo-cap?
The acting process is no different whatsoever. If I was to play Gollum in a 21st-century setting, and he was on the street, I wouldn't play him any differently than if I was playing him in Middle Earth. But in terms of the backstory, the emotional content of the character, the approach is the same. So for a primal ape, you have to learn physical ape behavior and movements. What this all adds up to is acting, really, and it doesn't matter whether you're wearing a costume or makeup, or if you're putting on a unitard and a head-mounted camera.

Most people know your work but don't get to see your face.
It's liberating for an actor. It allows you to transport yourself and see yourself in any character. Because that's what I'm here to do: I'm here to be an interesting character.

One tough talker

Interview.
Emmanuelle Seigner doesn't mince words about herself or about her husband, Roman Polanski.

Emmanuelle Seigner is nothing if not honest. The actress is getting raves for her role in "Venus in Fur," directed by her husband, Roman Polanski, in which she plays an actress clashing with a theater director (Mathieu Amalric).

"I think this is my first big great role," Seigner confesses. "Which is sad. But let's face it, it's true."

She does tear into the role of Vanda, who slips in and out of the character for which she's auditioning: a woman who dominates her male admirer.

"It's not realistic," she says. "Like 'Rosemary's Baby,' you don't know if it's all in his imagination. Or maybe [her character is] a goddess. Or maybe she's just a girl who wants to take revenge and give him a lesson."

How does Polanski treat his wife on the set? "He treats me like the other actors," she reveals. She says he doesn't confide in her on his artistic decisions — ever. "He's not a very talkative person. He's charming, but he doesn't talk so much about himself or what he's going to do. He just does it. He's not a word man, he's an action man."

That sounds similar to her own approach to acting: "I don't think about it too much. I just do it. My approach is not intellectual at all. I just learn my lines then I let myself do it without thinking too much."

Visit Metro.us to read more about Seigner and "Venus in Fur."

EMMANUELLE SEIGNER PLAYS AN ACTRESS MESSING WITH A THEATER DIRECTOR IN "VENUS IN FUR." GETTY IMAGES

Everyone's a critic

Seigner on Polanski

"Venus in Fur" was also a chance to work again with one of her favorite filmmakers: her husband. "What I like about this movie is it's closer to [Polanski's] older movies, like 'Knife in the Water,' 'Repulsion' [and] 'Cul-de-sac.'"

It turns out that she's candid about Polanski's movies too. When asked about his previous theatrical adaptation, "Carnage," she says, "'Carnage' is not a Polanski movie to me. It's very bourgeois. I think any director could have done that movie. It's a good movie, and it's very well-acted. But to me it's not the kind of Polanski movie I love."

When asked if she told him that, she replies, "Yeah!" Does he mind? "No, he doesn't mind. That's my opinion!"

For the record, she also doesn't like "Death and the Maiden," his 1994 thriller with Sigourney Weaver and Ben Kingsley. She cites "Rosemary's Baby" as her favorite, with "The Fearless Vampire Killers," "Cul-de-sac" and "Venus" not far behind. "His soul's back in this movie," she says.

Box office. Humans allow 'Apes' to triumph over big space robots

Koba (Toby Kebbell, left) leads an assault in "Dawn of the Planet of the Apes." / WETA

"Dawn of the Planet of the Apes," a sequel about highly intelligent apes that battle with humans for dominance, has knocked the giant "Transformers" robots out of the top spot on U.S. and Canadian movie charts.

The 3-D "Apes" movie collected $73 million in ticket sales from Friday through Sunday, according to estimates from Rentrak. "Transformers: Age of Extinction," a sequel that ruled the box office the two previous weekends, dropped to second place with $16.5 million.

"Tammy," a Melissa McCarthy comedy about a fast-food worker who gets fired, claimed the No. 3 spot with $12.9 million.

"Dawn" debuted stronger than 2011's "Rise of the Planet of the Apes," which grossed $54.8 million during its opening weekend. "Dawn" also exceeded pre-weekend forecasts for a debut of $63 million to $70 million at North American theaters. "Apes" added another $31 million in international markets for a global debut of $104 million, according to 20th Century Fox, the unit of 21st Century Fox which released it.

In limited release, Richard Linklater's "Boyhood," filmed over 12 years, grossed a stunning $359,000 from only five theaters. Its per screen average of $71,800 was second highest of 2014, after "The Grand Budapest Hotel," which holds the all-time record. REUTERS

Cooking with Jessica Alba

Easy recipes. The super-fit celeb and mom gets creative with coconut water.

There are certain celebrities whose bodies are so close to perfection that you can't help but wonder: What the heck does she eat? Jessica Alba is one of those people, and we had to know her secret. Alba revealed to us that one of her secrets is cooking with Zico Premium Coconut Water. We joined her in the kitchen and got her to teach us three easy recipes.

Recipe

Watermelon ice pops

We finished off our meal together with something sweet and refreshing. "My kids love watermelon," Alba says. If you don't have ice pop molds, she says you can use Dixie cups and the ice pops turn out just as delicious.

Ingredients:
- 4 cups watermelon chunks, seeds removed
- ½ cup Zico Premium Coconut Water
- Juice of 1 fresh lime
- 2 tablespoons agave nectar
- Ice pop molds

Directions:
Combine watermelon, coconut water, lime juice and agave nectar in a blender. Puree until smooth. Transfer to ice pop molds and freeze.

Recipe. Kale salad with coconut water vinaigrette dressing

Ingredients

For salad:
- 1 bunch kale, washed; remove stems and ribs
- 1 peach, sliced
- 1 plum, sliced
- 1 nectarine, sliced
- ½ cup blackberries
- ½ cup sliced almonds

For vinaigrette:
- ¼ cup Zico Premium Coconut Water
- 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon black pepper

"What's great about this salad is that you can add any kind of fruit to it," Alba tells us. If you've struggled with making kale at home, so has she. "Whenever I made kale, it was always really tough," Alba says. "What I learned is to massage the dressing into the kale."

Directions:
Combine all ingredients except almonds and blackberries into a large bowl and massage kale with the vinaigrette until leaves become soft and dark green. Toss sliced fruit with dressed kale. Garnish with blackberries and sliced almonds.

Recipe. Chicken with mango salsa

Ingredients

For chicken:
- 4 boneless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch cubes
- ¾ cup Zico Premium Coconut Water
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- ¼ cup fresh lime juice
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1-2 garlic cloves, peeled
- 1 teaspoon salt

For mango salsa:
- 2 mangoes, peeled and diced
- 2 teaspoons minced red onion
- 1 teaspoon lime zest
- ½ cup Zico Premium Coconut Water

Alba likes to prep her meals in the morning to reduce cooking time at night. "I marinate the chicken in the coconut water in a Ziplock baggie in the morning."

Directions:
Combine all chicken ingredients except the chicken and blend until smooth. Marinate meat for 12 hours in the refrigerator. Grill chicken on skewers for 6-10 minutes per side. Garnish with mango salsa.

Summer is the perfect time to pick up a new skill. / DIGITAL VISION

Extra tip

Join a book club

The New York Times recently noted that about 5 million Americans are in book clubs. It's a great way to get exposed to different authors and ideas while making new friends.

4 Ways to beat brain drain this summer

Continuing education. Don't let the dog days of summer prevent you from learning new tricks.

It's hard to get anything done when it's boiling hot outside. But with long weekends and a good central air system, summer can be a great time to expand your mind and learn a new skill. Here are just a few ideas.

1 Learn the stock market. Kapitall, a new online investing platform, is designed for those who are just starting to get their feet wet. Founded by veterans of the finance and tech worlds, as well as a video game designer, Kapitall allows users to set up a virtual stock portfolio. Utilizing virtual money, users can practice trading stocks, take lessons and compete tournament-style against other users.

"There are many that would say that the market is a game — we're not trying to say that," says Kapitall's chief operating officer Jarett Lilien. "But if you look at games, games should be approachable to those who are new to it." Many people think that the markets are extremely hard to understand, Lilien continues. "There are a lot of barriers to entry, and the problem is that they are intimidating to access as a newbie," he says. "We really try to target a mindset, and that's somebody who wants something that's less intimidating." Advanced users can use the software to create a real portfolio.

2 Become bilingual. Are you sad you've lost all of your high school Spanish or French? The free program Duolingo.com lets you study French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese with a variety of games and quizzes.

3 Read the classics. If you're looking for something more intellectually stimulating than the stereotypical beach read, you can find thousands of literary classics to download for free on sites like Project Gutenberg and ClassicReader.com.

4 Develop a marketable skill. Lynda.com offers hundreds of courses on subjects like video editing, photography and design. You can advance your career or simply start a new hobby by mastering software like Photoshop or Final Cut Pro.

Workplace drama. Emily Post's family is bringing etiquette to the digital age with these tips.

Emily Post made a name for herself in the early 1900s as a world-renowned expert on etiquette and manners. Several generations later, her descendants are continuing her legacy with a 21st-century twist — by advising people on life in the digital age.

"We asked Lizzie Post, Emily's great-great-granddaughter. and one of the authors of the latest edition of "Emily Post's The Etiquette Advantage in Business" for her take on social media dilemmas many of us face in the workplace.

Lizzie Post sits, center, with family members and co-authors Anna Post, Peter Post and Daniel Post Senning. / SABIN GRATZ

What if you don't want to write that recommendation?

"I don't recommend friends," says Post. "It's one thing to be friends with you, but that doesn't mean that I know your work. With endorsements, it's a little bit different. If I have seen your blog and have read your book, then I feel like I can do it."

Should you accept that LinkedIn request?

With the popularity of LinkedIn, it's common to get connection requests from everyone from school friends to your neighbors. "I don't respond to people on LinkedIn that I don't know well or that I haven't worked with closely," says Post. "For people like high school friends, unless I know your work, I decline the request."

LAKSHMI GANDHI

Digital ethics

To friend or not to friend?

Think hard about whether you want to add your co-workers on Facebook. "While typically most of us have always bonded with our co-workers, it's really different today," Lizzie Post points out. "Previously, it was very controlled in what you allowed your co-workers to see [about your life outside of work]," she says.

"You have to decide what works for you. You can always tell a co-worker, 'I had to make a decision and I decided not to mix my work and personal lives.'"

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Getting the whole family involved in home decoration or renovations will make the work go much faster.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Family discord will lead to a dilemma. You will be able to steer clear of conflicts if you keep an open mind and compromise.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Keep a lid on your temper. If you become frustrated with everyone around you, do something that will keep you occupied and out of trouble. It's better to be safe than sorry.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. You will be restless if you have too much idle time. Plan an inexpensive outing. A nature walk or a trip to an art gallery or museum won't blow your budget.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. No matter what you do, you'll face opposition. Don't take criticism to heart. Do the best you can, and refuse to engage.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Spend some time and money on yourself or your surroundings. If you are too giving, there may not be enough left over.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. You will be taken aback by some unanticipated changes in your living arrangements. Don't overreact or become anxious.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. You will find fault with everyone and everything today. Think before you speak, or you will ostracize everyone around you. Keep busy.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Be tolerant of family members. Sometimes, the smallest issues can be blown out of proportion if you are disagreeable.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Inactivity will be your downfall. Make alterations to your everyday routine that will move you in a positive direction.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Traveling can be a source of entertainment. The more diverse your outlook, the easier it will be to envision new possibilities and goals. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Bee aware of pesticides

Working with Toxics Action Center has opened my eyes to the issue of neonicotinoid pesticides in supposedly bee-friendly plants. As a volunteer coach for my local Girls On the Run chapter near my college, I took it upon myself to work with my third- through fifth-grade girls to plant a garden. After reading the report "Gardeners Beware," I am now terrified that our small garden plot that was such a wonderful experience for these young inner-city girls may be harming the local bees. I cannot express my concern and disdain for the companies that are allowing consumers to unknowingly poison bees.

He loves New York

Anthony officially stays with Knicks

Carmelo Anthony is just the latest NBA superstar to spread the wealth (of superstars), declining to try and win a championship in Miami or Chicago and instead telling Knicks fans that "through it all, my heart never wavered." He will return with his hometown team, just as LeBron James did returning to his native Cleveland earlier this weekend.

Flyers have impressive stock of defensive talent

NHL. This year's Flyers Development Camp boasted one talented young defenseman after another.

Flyers' prospect Sam Morin could make a big impact — he is 6-foot-7, after all. / GETTY IMAGES

Cap against the wall

The Flyers have over $30 million committed to veteran defensemen.

- Mark Streit, $5.25M
- Andrew MacDonald, $5M
- Braydon Coburn, $4.5M
- Luke Schenn, $3.6M
- Nicklas Grossmann, $3.5M
- Kimmo Timonen, $2M
- Nick Schultz, $1.25M
- Chris Pronger, $4.9M (comes off the cap at the start of the season.)

Who will it be? And when?

That's the underlying story behind the Flyers Development Camp, where Philadelphia's NHL hopefuls have gathered this past weekend for a crash course on how to get — and stay — at the next level. Of particular interest is the log-jam of defensemen the Flyers have been stockpiling through the draft the past few years: Shayne Gostisbehere, Samuel Morin, Robert Hagg and Mark Alt, as well as this year's first and third round picks, Travis Sanheim and Mark Friedman, respectively.

New GM Ron Hextall and coach Craig Berube are crossing their fingers that a couple of them have what it ultimately takes to make the grade. But no one's expecting it to happen soon.

For one thing the Flyers have a staggering $30.04 million — nearly half the $69 cap — committed to returning defensemen.

With most of them locked into long-term contracts, that doesn't leave much room for the kids to crack the lineup.

That's assuming they're good enough, of course. And keep in mind the last home grown defenseman to play regularly for the orange and black was Chris Therien in 2004.

Quoted

"It would be really fun if me, Ghost [Gostisbehere], Morin and Sanheim could be a top four in the Flyers in four years."

Robert Hagg, Flyers prospect

"Making the team going into training camp, that's everybody's goal," said Gostisbehere. "But if that's not in my future for right now, that's fine. I'll be in the AHL and it will be fun."

On the other hand the 6-foot-7 Morin, last year's No. 1 pick, sees no reason he can't break through now.

"If I have a good camp, we'll see," said 19-year-old Morin. "I live in the present. Right now I'm in development camp after my Team Canada camp. For sure, I think I'll have my chance."

But with so many holdovers clogging the lineup, it will probably be a while before Flyers fans get to see wholesale changes on the defense.

"In three to four years, maybe all of us are up at the NHL level," predicted the 19-year-old Swede Hagg, who expects to learn more playing for the AHL Phantoms than if he went back home.

Hamels surpassed 100 career wins this season. / GETTY IMAGES

Hamels would be happy to stay put

MLB. As rumors swirl, the Phillies pitcher admits he is not looking to be traded this season.

Cole Hamels is arguably the biggest and most desirable trade chip out there for the Phillies.

He has a solid 2.93 ERA and has been dealing with positively awful run support, as is indicated by his 3-5 record. He is also only 30 years old and in the prime of his career.

The Phillies head to the All Star break at 42-53 and will be sellers when the trade deadline approaches on July 31.

But Hamels isn't ready to jump ship just yet.

"I think I've developed a really good routine here," Hamels told the media after his most recent no decision in Saturday's extra innings loss to Washington, "and it's something I enjoy, playing for this team, this organization and especially these fans just because I have great memories and I want to continue them."

The 2008 World Series MVP has a limited no-trade clause, and has a list of nine teams he would be willing to accept a trade to.

And while it seems, despite being frustrated with his run support, the sluggish offense and the aging core of his fellow teammates, he is not looking to play elsewhere.

He has made it clear, if he leaves, it will be the organization making a business decision.

"I think we all understand that baseball doesn't last too long for many of us," Hamels said. "When you have the joy to play in front of a city and for an organization [like the Phillies] you want to do it for as long as possible. But you also understand it's a business and they have an obligation to the fans. And if things don't work they have to make moves."

Nationals give Phils series loss before break

If Kyle Kendrick could come in after the first inning during his starts, he would have a lot more success.

Kendrick gave up an early three-run homer, (raising his first inning ERA to 11.37) and the Phillies never bounced back in a 10-3 defeat Sunday.

Ryan Howard, Cody Asche and Cameron Rupp each had an RBI as the Phillies trailed by a large deficit, with Asche collecting two of the Phillies five hits.

The Phils dropped two straight after winning five in a row last week, four against the then first-place Brewers. METRO

Kendrick has allowed 24 runs in the first inning. / GETTY IMAGES

Germany defeats Argentina in final

World Cup. Mario Gotze scored the lone goal in the 113th minute to lift Germany to its fourth World Cup.

It felt like a scene we had seen before.

A scoreless deadlock, extra time dwindling away and penalty kicks on the horizon.

The World Cup was just under 10 minutes away from being decided by penalties — and then Mario Gotze bounced the ball off his chest in the 113th minute and fired a shot passed Argentina's goalie Sergio Romero to give Germany a 1-0 advantage, one that would hold through the rest of extra time.

The Germans posted an impressive 18 goals in the World Cup and handed Argentina its third World Cup finals setback.

Handing out hardware

Here are some of the notable awards handed out after Germany won the Cup.

- Manuel Neuer beat out Tim Howard for the Golden Glove (best goalkeeper).
- Lionel Messi won the Golden Ball (best overall player) in the losing effort.
